

Guoxi Liang is currently an associate professor in the department of Artificial Intelligence, Wenzhou Polytechnic University, and a master supervisor in Wenzhou University, China. He received his B.S degree in information and computing science at Wenzhou University, China, in 2005; the M.S degree in computer application technology at Zhejiang University of Technology, China, in 2009; and the Ph.D. degree at Kunsan National University, South Korea, in 2020. His present research interests center on evolutionary computation, swarm intelligence algorithm, deep Learning, as well as intelligent medical diagnosis and text mining. He is an editorial review board member of Evolutionary Bioinformatics, editorial board member of The Scientific World, Young Editorial Board Member of Phenomics Journal and reviewers for many journals such as Information Science, Applied Soft Computing, etc.. He has published more than 50 papers in international journals and conference proceedings, including Expert Systems with Applications, Knowledge-based Systems, and among others.